
Section II

The Great Man

“I am not a great man, but I have known a few.”

– Wes Morgan

To be a great man in my book you need only to qualify in the following ways:

- You have had some conspicuous business or career success.
- I feel compelled to share stories of your greatness.
- I have been in a position to observe you carefully or had access to information that allows me to hold you up to the light.

It isn't about discovering a cure for cancer or landing on the moon or finding world peace. It isn't Profiles in Courage or a documentary or a book of biographies. In fact, this portion of this book provides a context from the corporate perspective (as much as the cynical author can offer a corporate point of view.)

It all means something. I'm not sure what. Enjoy the journey.